It will be seen by the annexed weekly return of new cases and deaths, that the epidemic has considerably abated since our publication of last Saturday.

The physicians report 13 new cases yesterday, which is a falling off of 12 from the day before. The intermediate Oakdale Cemetery were 3, a falling off of 1.—We call attention to our weekly statement, which is as follows:

It may not be improper to state that one of the burials yesterday came from the Sound.

The above account of deaths does not include negroes, or others buried outside of Oakdale Cemetery.

We have been promised a statement of the burials of the colored population in a few days, when we hope to be able to give as nearly as possible the full amount of deaths occurring from the prevailing epidemic.

Yellow Fever
by Joseph Sheppard

Yellow Fever virus is a noncontagious tropical disease that is spread to humans by the bite of an infected female mosquito.

Found in parts of South America and Africa, there are two kinds of yellow fever. Jungle fever is mainly a disease of monkeys. People get jungle yellow fever when they put themselves in the middle of this natural cycle and are bitten by mosquitoes that have been infected by monkeys. It is rare and occurs mainly in persons who work in tropical rain forests.

Urban yellow fever is a disease of humans. It is spread by mosquitoes that have been infected by other people. Aedes aegypti is the type of semidomestic mosquito that usually carries yellow fever from human to human. These mosquitoes have adapted to living among humans in cities, towns and villages. They breed in discarded tires, flower pots, oil drums and water storage containers close to human dwellings. Urban yellow fever is the cause of most yellow fever outbreaks and epidemics.

The disease initially appeared in Africa and was brought to the Americas at the time of the slave trade. First described in medical terms during the 17th century in the Yucatan Peninsula, Mexico. Ultimately yellow fever spread to the U.S., Spain and other countries. It wasn’t until 1881 that Cuban physician Carlos Finlay hypothesized how yellow fever is transmitted by mosquito bites. Finley’s theory was verified in 1901 by the work of several investigators, notably American bacteriologist Walter Reed (Sept. 17, 1851 - Nov. 22, 1902), who also proved the agent to be a virus. Advanced methods of sanitation, drainage of mosquito breeding grounds and quarantine of ships arriving from infected areas brought the disease under control.

Many yellow fever infections are mild, but the disease can cause severe, life threatening illness. Symptoms of severe infection, starting 3 to 6 days after being bitten by an infected mosquito, are high fever, chills, headaches, muscle aches, vomiting, and backache. After a brief recovery period, the second stage of infection can lead to shock and kidney and liver failure. Liver failure causes jaundice (yellowing of the skin and the whites of the eyes), which gives yellow fever its name. Hemorrhage from mucous membranes, vomiting of blood, lead to the characteristic, so called black vomit of yellow fever. Death occurs usually between the fourth and eighth day after the onset. In cases of recovery, jaundice may persist for some time but the infected person has immunity for life.

No treatment is known for yellow fever. In 1939 a vaccine was developed to confer immunity to the disease and all persons traveling between endemic regions are required vaccination.

In the early autumn of 1862, Wilmingtonians distressed from their third recorded epidemic of yellow fever. Over the past fourteen decades, folklorists blamed this third epidemic on the crew of the profiteering boat Flora or better known as the Kate which arrived on August 6, 1862. The Richmond Dispatch printed “...crew members died in the city several weeks before others of a similar nature were noticed.” In response the Daily Journal reported on October 30th, 1862, “Now the last of the crew of the Kate that we are aware of dying here was Dennis Mitchell, who died on the 17th of August, and it is notorious here that long before the end of August, there was more than one death from some sudden and mysterious cause, which now would be unhesitatingly pronounced yellow fever.” Even so, the different church’s funeral registries and newspaper reports and death notices, attributing yellow fever as the cause, do not begin until mid-September.

2. The years 1800 and 1821 were also yellow fever epidemic times in Wilmington. Moore NHPL. Daily Journal October 31st, 1862.

3. St. Thomas and St. James Death Registers show almost a month's gap between deaths. Some historians cite Oakdale Cemetery Records. These records do not list cause of death. The Daily Journal, September 16, 1862 printed a statement from Mayor John Dawson, now after enquiring all the physicians in town he found five yellow fever cases. The newspaper also furnished a report from James Dickson, M.D. “Since Tuesday the 9 instant I have seen five cases of the disease.” Local legend has is that Lewis Swartzman became the first confirmed yellow fever victim when he died on September 3, 1862. However, the Daily Journal printed his death as from apoplexy, which is a stroke. Another tidbit is that Swartzman was recognized as German. He actually was a native of Forchheim, Bavaria. Helen Simmons, Marriage & Death Notices From Wilmington, NC Newspapers 1860-1885 (Wilmington: Old New Hanover Genealogical Society, 1987) 221. It is very possible history has Swartzman confused with Kate to the epidemic becomes more difficult.
Regardless who held responsibility, Wilmington suffered greatly. The imprint of that terrible period lasts with us.

William Marion (Bill) Reaves of Wilmington died Monday, November 6, 2000 at the Mariner Health Care Facility. He was born on June 3, 1934, in Newark, New Jersey, the son of the late Marion William Whitford and Florence Belle Lynk Reaves. His grandfather, Richard Martin Van Buren Reaves, was a Confederate veteran.

In 1968, Mr. Reaves became a resident of Wilmington, his father's childhood home. During the 1970s, he worked both as a librarian and a reporter for the Wilmington Star-News, where he wrote the popular local columns, "Inside Old Wilmington" and "Looking Back." In 1976, during the United States' Bicentennial, he wrote an award-winning series of articles on the history of the Lower Cape Fear. Working with the Historic Wilmington Foundation, he was actively involved in Wilmington's historic preservation movement. In the 1980s, he helped catalog the artifact and image collection of the Cape Fear Museum. He also worked for the North Carolina State Historic Sites at Brunswick Town, Fort Fisher and the Town Creek Indian Mound. A popular lecturer, he taught local history at Cape Fear Community College and the New Hanover County Public Library.

A noted historian, Mr. Reaves was involved in over fifty local history publications and genealogical abstracts, covering New Hanover, Brunswick, Pender and Duplin counties. A charter member of the Southport Historical Society, he wrote a remarkable four volume history of Southport. He was the author of Strength Through Struggle, The Chronological and Historical Record of the African-American Community in Wilmington, North Carolina, 1865-1950, for which he received a national award from the American Association of State and Local History. His works have also been honored by the North Carolina Society of County and Local Historians, the North Carolina Department of Archives and History, the Lower Cape Historical Society and the Old New Hanover Genealogical Society. NEW HANOVER COUNTY DEED BOOK "D"

Many of New Hanover County's earliest records were destroyed by courthouse fires. What was left of the county's first two deed books, A and B, was combined to form AB. This book was abstracted many years ago by Mae Blake Graves. Deed Book C was published in the Courier from 1992 to 1996. This series of abstracts from Deed Book D began in the Summer 1997 issue of the Courier. New Hanover was formed in 1729 from Craven County. Bladen and Onslow counties were formed from New Hanover in 1734, Duplin County in 1750, Brunswick County in 1764, part of New Hanover was annexed to Sampson County in 1795, and Pender County, last but not least, broke away from New Hanover in 1875. The following abstract of Deed Book D, which covers many early records from the above counties, was compiled by Ida Brooks Kellam in 1939 and 1940.
